Toon Goggles recently scored a deal with Western Digital, which is now offering the on-demand platform's family-friendly content on its WD TV Live media players. "WD TV Live streaming media players transform a user's TV into a smart TV, providing complete access throughout the home to popular Internet-based entertainment," says Stephen L. Hodge, the managing director of Toon Goggles. "We are delighted to be added to their broad selection of impressive channel services." Toon Goggles is pre-installed on a variety of electronics, including Techno Source's Kurio 7 Android tablet for families, the Sharp Aquos LED TV and Barnes and Noble's NOOK HD and NOOK HD+, to name a few. It is also available online and as an application for Android, iOS, Windows 8 and Sony mobile devices.
